ABOUT THE JOURNAL

The Journal of Legal Research and Analysis (ISSN: 3049-4028) is an open-access, annual, peer-reviewed academic journal committed to advancing scholarly dialogue across the disciplines of law, social sciences, and related fields.

The journal embraces a broad and interdisciplinary approach to legal scholarship, intentionally transcending the boundaries of conventional legal disciplines. It provides a dynamic platform for academicians, legal practitioners, researchers, and students to engage in critical discourse and explore diverse perspectives on contemporary socio-legal issues.

JLRA is particularly focused on fostering intellectual engagement with emerging legal challenges shaped by the ever-evolving social, economic, political, and technological landscape. By encouraging contributions from eminent legal minds and thought leaders, the journal seeks to illuminate the complexities encountered by lawmakers, the judiciary, practitioners, and society at large. Through rigorous peer review and editorial excellence, The Journal of Legal Research and Analysis aspires to contribute meaningfully to legal academia, policy formation, and practical application.
